MAUREEN HUFFAM NAMED DIRECTOR AT CONSERVATION SERVICES GROUP

WESTBOROUGH, Mass., Dec. 10, 2008 – Conservation Services Group (CSG) today announced Maureen K. Huffam as senior director of human resources, according to Wanda Reindorf, chief financial officer. In addition to recruiting, Huffam will be responsible for performance metrics, compensation, organizational development, management training and automation.

Most recently, Huffam was the human resource director for Shriners Hospital for Children in Boston. There, she was responsible for the implementation of strategic initiatives designed to increase revenue, patient census and staff retention. She also instituted staff education programs and was a member of the hospital's Leadership Team. Prior to her position at Shriners, Huffman served as corporate human resource director for the Plymouth Rock Group of Companies in Boston. In this position, she led the HR team in the acquisition of a multi-state company, developed new recruiting processes and secured a significant Workforce Training grant for the company. Early in her career, Huffam worked in HR capacities as a consultant and as an executive with an insurance company.

Huffam belongs to several industry organizations including the Society for Human Resource Professionals and the American Society for Health Care Human Resources Administration. She completed level two of the Six Sigma training and is a member of the Boston YMCA's League of Women Achievers. Huffam received a B.S. from the University of Massachusetts in Amherst. A native of Framingham, she is a resident of Medway.

Reindorf said, "CSG is experiencing significant growth, as the demand for renewable energy and energy efficiency services increases. To support this expansion, we need many competent, qualified individuals from all over the country. We are confident that Maureen will be able to help CSG recruit top-notch talent and we are excited to have her on our management team."
