MICHAEL DIETER JOINS CONSERVATION SERVICES GROUP AS EXECUTIVE VICE PRESIDENT OF SOFTWARE AND TECHNOLOGY

WESTBOROUGH, Mass., Aug. 26, 2010 -- Conservation Services Group (CSG) today announced the appointment of Michael J. Dieter as executive vice president of software and technology, according to Stephen L. Cowell, chief executive officer. In this newly created position, Dieter will oversee CSG's rapidly expanding information technology division and the development of a new information systems vision for the national energy services firm. Dieter is a member of CSG's Executive Committee and will work out of the firm's corporate headquarters in Westborough.

Dieter brings more than 20 years of solid technology and management experience to CSG. Throughout his career, he has held several chief technology officer (CTO) positions and has a strong track record of developing and overseeing many successful software products and systems. His CTO experience includes seven years at HOMEDIRECT USA, where he served on the executive staff of that supply chain company.

Prior to HOMEDIRECT, Dieter was CTO of Clicklogistics, of Billerica, Mass., where he developed the company's first Web-based transportation order management system. Dieter also served as CTO of Nationstreet, an Internet capital funded start-up in Milford Mass. and was a senior vice president of IT in the Boston office of Putnam Investments. He began his career as a senior software engineer at Centerline, Inc.

Cowell said, "Mike's appointment as EVP of software and technology signifies a new era for CSG. As our company grows and our technology needs become more complex, someone with Mike's experience and vision will ensure optimal IT products, systems and services for our ever growing number of employees and our valued clients from coast-to-coast."
